Authors claim BG not gay-friendly

Guide states University offers poor living environment for homosexuals

By Melissa Lipowski
The BG News

An unfavorable light has been shed on the University environment as well as the Bowling Green community.

According to the information published in "The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Student Guide to Colleges, Universities and Graduate Schools," the University offers a poor living environment for homosexual students.

As one of over 200 institutions listed in the guide, the University is said to be lacking a committee on gay, lesbian and bisexual issues as well and a statement concerning sexual orientation is not included in the affirmative action statement.

In addition, students from the University surveyed by the guide said they believe that homophobia is a serious problem on campus in the forms of hate mail and harassment.

According to Carolyn Conrad, adviser to LAGA, the book gives an accurate depiction of the University and of Bowling Green.

"There is really a low sense of community among the homosexual population of the University," Conrad said. "There are not many events that can bring homosexual students on campus together. They can't go to the coffee houses and going to the bars is much too dangerous. After those places are taken away, where else can they turn?"

Although the University is relatively gay-friendly in terms of the police force and professors, Bowling Green is a rather conservative community LAGA

President Todd Shawler said. "In terms of students, this campus is as diverse as anywhere," Shawler said.

The majority of University students are not negative, they are just unaware, Conrad said.

Contrary to what the guide portrays, there are services available for students who are homosexual and for those who are curious, Conrad said.

The Counseling Center, the LINK and the LAGA line, a hotline that answers calls from students on an anonymous basis from 7-10 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, effectively address sexual identity issues, Conrad said.

There has also been a widespread campus movement to combat homophobia, she said.

"People are beginning to open up," Conrad said. "There is a lot of education going on in the residence halls and living units as well as in the classrooms. Mem-tion is out there."

Despite the efforts of many campus organizations to make changes in the atmosphere, Shawler said that he would not recommend the University to other homosexual students.

right now, I definitely think there are more gay-friendly places," Shawler said.

Conrad, however, said that she would recommend the University, but with reservation.

"Homosexual students have to be aware of what they are going to face once they get here," Conrad said. "For students who come from large cities, where the homosexual population is highly visible, Bowling Green will definitely be a shock."

Homosexual students need to have the right channels of information to succeed at the University, Conrad said. Without them, the campus will not meet their needs. As with any institution, college is what students make of it, Conrad said.

"College is whatever you make it to be whether you are gay or straight," she said. "Your expe-

Committee defines next BG president's necessary qualities

By Lawrence Hannan
The BG News

The University Presidential Search Committee has continued its quest for the new University president by releasing a statement defining what qualities they will be looking for in the next president.

Committee Chairwoman C. Ellen Connolly had previously said the University was accepting applications from anyone who wanted to apply. The information in the statement narrowed the focus but still left the job open to many people in the field of education.

"We are interested in candidates who have records of successful leadership, who are dedicated to the pursuit of excellence in education and who are fully committed to the University's affirmative action goals and objectives," she said.

The newest statement lists several ideal qualifications that any serious candidate for the University presidency must meet.

They include a distinguished record of achievement, either in academics or in the candidate's chosen field. In addition, applicants must have outstanding personal characteristics including integrity and exemplary moral value, as well as proven leadership capacity demonstrated in complex or challenging situations.

Commissioner debate focuses on economy

By Cynthia Kent
The BG News

In a Wednesday afternoon debate all three Wood County Commissioner candidates said the most important issue in the race is economic growth.

Incumbent Republican candidate Robert Latta said economic development for Wood County is important to ensure the county's children jobs in the future.

"We have great schools in Wood County," Latta said. "Wood County has a great quality of life and we want our children to know they can find business opportunity in Wood County."

Latta also emphasized the importance of working with other communities on projects to strengthen community relations.

"We need to interact with other communities through regional-

Polish leader describes economy

Politician lectures on bi-polar structure

By Nicole Pankuch
The BG News

A little bit of history was brought to the University last night as Polish Solidarity leader Jacek Kuron lectured about politics in Poland.

Kuron spoke to the University community in 129 Overman Hall about politics and the economy in Poland and in the world. Since Kuron does not speak English, Josef Blass, math professor, who is from Poland, translated for him.

"The economic crisis is of general nature. Not just in Poland, but in the world," Kuron said.

Kuron emphasized the fact that since the destruction of the bi-polar system, the fall of the economic and political state of the world is inevitable.

"It might appear that the Soviet Union's fall strengthened the United States, however, that fall will take the United States with it," Kuron said.

Kuron cited the example of the war in Bosnia as a way of the two poles - one of democracy, the other of communism - are fighting each other.

"[In the Bosnia war], no one can win or lose anything so the conflict keeps going on," Kuron said.

In real life, Kuron stated that no one should expect the breakdown of the bi-polar system will produce an ideal world.

"Small wars fought by different political groups might be more dangerous than one big global war fought by two huge superpowers," Kuron said.

Since the fall of Communism in Poland, Kuron stressed the fact that the lack of security of a government providing everything for its people diminished the sense of freedom the people in Poland wanted.

"Those in Poland who lost their sense of security do not feel free because they need security to look for freedom," Kuron said.

What the world seeks in the search for unity will never be found, Kuron said.

"We'll never solve any con-licts once and for all because there is no paradise on Earth," Kuron said.

County incumbents deserve return trip

It's almost voting day, so as people choose state and national candidates to represent them, they should also keep in mind the importance of voting for local candidates, such as Wood County auditor and Wood County commissioner.

There are three candidates for county commissioner -- incumbent Republican candidate Robert Latta, Democratic candidate Susan Wynn and independent candidate Frank Tokes. All agree that stronger intercommunity relations need to be established to promote economic growth.

Latta said Bowling Green can save money by doing projects with other communities. He also said we need to ensure the community's children will have jobs in the future.

Wynn said she is interested in improving education. She is a 1965 graduate of the University and was a teacher and guidance counselor for Bowling Green City Schools. She said her knowledge of the educational system has given education priority status in her campaign.

Stokes said he will do all he can to promote economic growth in the county.

The News believes Latta would be the best choice for county commissioner. He has the experience in politics that Wynn and Stokes lack. He also has had experience with group projects. For example, he worked with Perrysburg on an electrical project and saved $30,000 in taxes.

Both candidates for county auditor are campaigning based on their experience in various areas. The Democratic candidate for county auditor, Chuck Bailey, has worked in business for 32 years.

Bailey said he has developed relationships with people in political offices of small and large towns. He said he believes he understands the needs of a smaller community.

The Republican candidate, incumbent Mike Sibberson, is also basing his campaign platform on his experience. Sibberson has worked with local government for 17 years, developing contacts with school board members, administrators and municipal courts.

The News believes Mike Sibberson would make a better county auditor. He has the experience and connections with the local government to get things accomplished.

Lessons learned from family life

It is that scary time of the season again, and no, I do not mean Halloween. Yes -- I am referring to Nov. 8, election day, which is quickly approaching us.

It is a reprieve for all of us because once that day arrives it means no more political ads that must be tolerated by the general public and a little bit of a respite for all of us politicians. However, this upcoming election is going to have a little more meaning than the usual mid-term one.

Generally, a mid-term election, one that takes place half way through a presidential term, is an indication of how the big man in the White House is doing.

Now anyone who has listened to any media outlet knows that this is going to be a dark Tuesday for the Democratic Party. We might not only lose a majority in the Senate, but we might also lose the majority in the State House of Representatives.

Being not only a card-carrying member of the Democratic party, but an officer in the State of Ohio Democratic Party, I have had the privilege of working with a lot of people.

From Capitol Hill staffers to State House aides to county chairpersons -- I have worked with them all. I thought that I was pretty solid in my beliefs, but if you are constantly being bombarded by reasons why you're wrong you start to believe it. So I started questioning my faith in the party as one would question their faith in Jesus.

Matt Fair

Why have I chose to devote my life to the Democratic party? Well, the obvious reason was that the boys in Columbus and in Washington throw a hell of a party and all of my contacts within the party have been positive.

However, it goes deeper than that. Don't worry this is not going to be one last ditch effort to convince you to vote for Joel Hyatt or any other candidate. I know things don't look good out there and most of you have made of your minds of who to vote for if, in fact, you are going to vote. So, stay with me and don't go to the classifieds yet.

Most of us get our political inclination from our families, and my case is no exception. Our parents try to teach us certain values and for the most part they stay with us in every situation including the ballot box. My family has a lot to do with why I am doing the things that I am doing today. I have many stories to tell, but I like to share with you the most important one.

I had a brother named Patrick. He died when I was in High School. Patrick was a very special child because he was mentally retarded and needed a lot of attention from my parents. Even though Patrick was not going to have the same kind of life that any of us have, he taught me more than anyone ever has or ever will in my life.

The special thing about all mentally handicapped people is their unrestrained love of others. My brother had an undying loyalty to me. Even when I had run-ins with the law, my brother still thought of me as innocent. They will always be there for you.

time making fun of my brother. I was so enraged that if I did not have to keep on eye on Patrick I would of gone over and done something about it. However, my mother came out of the store and we went on with our lives.

Looking back on it, I wish I would have been more brave and said something about it. I wish I could have said something any time someone makes fun of someone less fortunate than him or her. That is why I am working with the Democratic party. I believe that the core of the democratic philosophy is to protect and help those that cannot otherwise do so.

It is our duty as Americans to see that everyone gets a fair

"I believe that the core of the democratic philosophy is to protect and help those that cannot otherwise do so."

There is one occasion I remember that really encapsulates what I am trying to get across to you. My mother, brother and I went to the mall one day. At the time I think I was 14 or 15 and my brother was in a wheel chair. My mother went into a store and I didn't want to go, so Patrick and I sat outside of the store. We sat there and played around and had fun, until I noticed something.

Across the way was a group of teen-agers mocking the way my brother acted. There were about six of them just having a good old chance at being happy. I believe that through the Democratic party I can have the chance to improve as many lives as possible. Not for me, but for my family. We tend to forget sometimes that we are our families hopes and dreams.

So for my mother, for my father and for my brother I want to make this country a place we can believe in.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Soccer fans make all the difference

This is an open letter to all Falcon soccer fans:

On behalf of our student-athletes and staff, we would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation to all of the fans in attendance this past Sunday for our match against Michigan State, as well as their support of Falcon soccer throughout the season.

Your support this past Sunday played a far greater role than you may be aware for this was a very special day in more ways than one.

For our three seniors (Tim Concannon, Frank Frostino and Dan Traver) it was one last opportunity to showcase their talents for the student body, friends and family; for Falcon soccer it was only the third time in the 30-year history of the program that we have gone undefeated at home; for our players' parents, they were once again reminded of one of the main reasons why their son choose to attend the University -- the people. MAC.

We thank you for being a part of a fond memory to our seniors, for being a part of history, for bringing a smile to the faces of our parents and for contributing to the future of our program.

Go Falcons!

Gender equity issue result of no planning

I find it quite interesting and sad that our athletic directors were not concerned with Title IX -- the 1972 amendment to the Civil Rights Act that forbids gender discrimination in educational institutions that receive federal funds ("University's plan for equity in athletics may lack funds," The News Oct. 18).

Our new athletic director stated that data from a study conducted one year ago recognizes money is the issue.

Just think:

If Title IX was recognized as an important issue 22 years ago there would be no such issue.

If only the athletic administrators concentrated on being futuristic enterprisers and not so much on football attendance.

If $200 a month were invested from 1972 to present over $60,000 would be available for compliance.

A law is to be adhered to, to be concerned with, and to be implemented.

In 1994, there is no excuse for the gender inequity at any school -- particularly this University.

Deju Vu advertisement has no place in paper

First, I would like to thank you on the behalf of the NTSA for the coverage that The News has given the organization this year.

However, we feel that the headline on Oct. 27 is misleading, in that it appears we have difficulty with the University as a whole.

This is not the case, as stated by the first sentence of the article.

Secondly, it is the opinion of the majority of the members of the NTSA that the Deja Vu advertisement has no place in The News.

Women are exploited enough and there is no need to further exploit women in the student paper.

Plus this, The News could have shown more respect to Army ROTC and placed the Deja Vu advertisement elsewhere instead of next to the Army ROTC ad.

The ad's placement degrades the ROTC program and those involved in ROTC. This isn't the Vietnam era and the Army has improved considerably over the past 25 years with higher standards and quality personnel who deserve to be respected.

Minister found guilty

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) A former minister was convicted of murder Wednesday in the shotgun slayings of an abortion doctor and his bodyguard.

The jury deliberated just 20 minutes before finding Paul Hill, 40, guilty. He could receive either life in prison or death in the electric chair.

After being barred by the judge from arguing that the slayings were justifiable homicide to save the lives of fetuses, Hill, acting as his own lawyer, put up no defense. He asked no questions

Connally also said people interested in the presidency had begun to apply.

"It's still early in the process but we've had several qualified people express interest in the position," she said.

The first phase of the application process is confidential. As a result Connally declined to give the names of the people who have applied.

The committee also recently spoke to current University President Paul Olscamp and current Miami University President Paul Risser, who addressed the role of a university president, she said.

The two men shared their views of what leadership qualities the committee should seek in the next University president.

"We wanted to get some the perspectives of some people who could speak authoritatively about the position of university president," Connally said. "Our conversations were extremely valuable in helping the committee focus on the kinds of questions and issues that [the University's] next president must be prepared to address."

Connally also said several members of the search committee were planning to release, with her approval, a newsletter detailing how the presidential search is going. She said it would be released at the University early next week.

ism," Latta said. "We worked with Perrysburg on an electrical project and saved $30,000 in taxes."

The democratic candidate Susan Wynn also said the citizens need to focus on economic growth within the community to keep the children in the county.

"We must have representation from all aspects and areas of the county because we can benefit from everyone through committees and representation," Wynn said.

A 1965 graduate from the University, Wynn was a teacher and guidance counselor for Bowling Green City Schools. She said her knowledge of the educational system has given education priority status in her campaign.

"With the emphasis on education to become the No. 1 priority for our governor, it will be critical to have someone who has had experience in the field of education," Wynn said.

The independent candidate Frank Tokes said Wood County must form teams with other communities in order to gain maximum economic growth for the community.

"[If elected] economic growth will continue," Tokes said. "And we will support anything that creates jobs."

All three of the candidates said security for the Wood County Court House must be improved to protect the employees inside.

Latta said he has already formed three committees to discuss areas of security that must be improved for the court house.

"At the end of November the committees will meet again and discuss what needs to be done," Latta said.

Wynn said security is "imperative" and we must look at other counties and see how they are handling their security problems.

"You never know where the crime is," Wynn said. "We need to be ready."

Tokes said employing top-notch sheriffs will increase security at the court house.

"How many murders happen in front of police officers?" Tokes said.

"We need to have metal detectors and require employees and visitors wear identification."

Snack cart in B.A. gives passers-by convenient snacks, drinks, sandwiches

By Heather Cvengros
The BG News

Students in the mood for a quick snack can grab a bite to eat before class without having to walk across campus.

At the beginning of the semester, the Commons Dining Hall and Food Operations established the B.A. Express snack cart.

The idea was to provide students and faculty with a convenient and quick way to grab snacks, according to Lesa Herbst, an employee at the B.A. Express.

"Food Operations saw the need to have snacks available for students so they wouldn't have to walk to the University Union," Herbst said.

The B.A. Express is located in the Business Administration Building and is open from 8 a.m. until 1:30 p.m.

It sells everything from bagels and sandwiches to snacks such as cookies and crackers. Beverages include soft drinks, juices, coffee and tea.

"It's very convenient. There are more selections that you can't get from a regular vending machine, like sandwiches," said Andrea Silvis, a senior.

The snack cart was established in the BA Building because it is crowded with students and faculty. "We chose the [Business Administration] Building because there is a high amount of traffic," said Perry Franketti, food service manager of Food Operations. "Lots of students and faculty do not have a chance to leave the building to grab a quick snack."

The cart seems to be popular with students and there is a demand for more food, Franketti said.

This year will serve as a trial run for the snack cart and could continue next year depending on its success, he said.

"If it continues to be successful, we would like to expand the hours and expand to more buildings," Franketti said.

While students cannot use their Quantum 90 meal cards, prices are fairly reasonable, Herbst said.

However, one University student disagrees.

"I think the prices are high but sometimes it's worth it for the convenience," said Jennifer Morris, a senior.

Researchers investigate students who drink, drive

By Jay Young
The BG News

Drinking alcohol at least four times a month and having access to a car are prerequisites for a study being conducted by a University psychology professor.

Harold Rosenberg, professor of psychology, and graduate student Dale Kulick are researching the thought process in a situation where a person has been drinking and has the opportunity to drive. They plan on interviewing 30-40 undergraduate students from the University by the end of the year.

"Drunk driving is a legal problem, it's an economic problem. It also seemed to me that there were psychological issues involved," Rosenberg said. "The study is designed to look at, to help understand and to investigate how normal, everyday college students cope with situations where they have an opportunity to drive after drinking."

Rosenberg said University students who qualify to be questioned for the project consume alcohol at least four times a month, have a valid driver's license and have access to a car. Those who participate will be asked to share experiences from both their drinking and their driving past.

"It's a qualitative study that is designed to help us learn more about what's going on with college students in terms of their drinking history and their driving history and drinking and driving," Rosenberg said.

Kulick, head interviewer for the project, is a second-year graduate student studying clinical psychology. He said one of the goals of the project is to educate the students.

"I expect that we will find that drinking and driving does in fact occur and that there are perhaps alternatives to driving after drinking that may not have occurred to students," Kulick said. "One of the goals of the project is to educate other students about some of those alternatives."

Rosenberg said he hopes to use the answers to the questions asked to design a prevention program. In order to create the program he needs students that qualify to volunteer.

Those who fit the requirements, but are under the legal drinking age are also being asked to participate in the project.

"What we're interested in is 'what's the normal behavior?'" Rosenberg said. "Even students who are not of age are drinking and are perhaps faced with drinking and driving situations."

Rosenberg said names of the students will be kept confidential.

"We're really strict about confidentiality. We don't put their names anywhere on the data sheet," Rosenberg said. "Other than signing a form of consent, we don't even want to know their name."

All students who participate will sign a consent form to inform them of their legal rights.

Kulick said those who participate will benefit from the experience.

"Participating in the project is not only a way for students to learn more about their own drinking and driving, but it is also a chance for them to educate other students," Kulick said.

The project is being funded by two grants. A grant from Louis Katzner, dean of the graduate school of psychology, is supporting Kulick's involvement. A small grant from the Psychology Department allows each student interviewed to receive $5.

Students interested in participating in the study should contact Rosenberg or Kulick at 372-2540.

perience can be really bad or really good, but it just depends on how you use the available resources. Homosexual students at the University have to remember that there is help out there."

According to the authors for the guide, Jan Mitchell-Sherrill and Craig Hardesty, studies estimate that one in six college students is gay, lesbian or bisexual, yet information regarding the living environment for these individuals is often unavailable.

"While the presence, role and acceptance of these students has received much attention in recent years, there is no resource by which students can judge the climate on the nation's schools," Mitchell-Sherrill and Hardesty said.

Responding to this problem, the authors conducted the survey among several thousand students and groups nationwide associated with the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force and attempted to give an accurate depiction of how the various institutions as well as the surrounding communities view homosexuality.

Associate professor receives Faculty Scholarship Award

Chairwoman wins accolades due to research regarding reflective thinking

By Julie Hamilton
The BG News

Research on reflective thinking has won a University professor the Faculty Scholarship Award. An associate professor won The Faculty Scholarship Award for her research on reflective thinking.

Patricia M. King, chairwoman of the Department of Higher Education and Student Affairs, is a leading scholar who has published extensively. She was given the award in September.

The Faculty Scholarship Award in the College of Education and Allied Professions is a $1,000 award given out every three years. Candidates are only judged on what they have done in the previous three years.

"We judge the candidates on four criteria," said Les Sternberg, dean of the College of Education and Allied Professions. Criteria which must be met include individual research and the research's impact on the field, originality of the research, evidence of peer judgement and scholarly reputation.

Last spring King's book, titled "Developing Reflective Judgement: Understanding and Promoting Intellectual Growth and Critical Thinking in Adolescents and Adults" was published. She also edited a liberal education journal about reflective judgement that came out in 1992.

"It was a busy three years. It was the culmination of a lot of things," King said. "The book was actually a 15-year process. It was a thrill [to see the book published]."

King's book studied three groups of students starting in the mid-1970s and the study lasted 10 years. King and her co-author, Karen Strohm Kitchener, studied the students' development in their reflective thinking process.

"We were watching changes in their reasoning," King said. "It was a slow, steady process of watching them go from thinking one-dimensionally to thinking broader with more depth and focus."

King's research specialty is in the reflective thinking. She said she wants to find ways to encourage reflective thinking in students.

"What we can do is instill curiosity," said King. "Reflective thinking doesn't just happen in the classroom. It takes place everywhere."

Sternberg said King's work is broad-based.

"Her work is basically on the cutting edge," Sternberg said. "It has an impact on a wide variety of areas."

King said her research in reflective thinking is an ongoing process that she plans to continue.

Honorary receives 'superior' recognition

By Genell Pavelich
The BG News

The University's chapter of Beta Alpha Psi, the national accounting honorary, received recognition recently as a superior chapter.

The accolade is the highest award presented by the national organization to a campus chapter.

In order to achieve superior chapter status, the organization had to fulfill different requirements on a point system. The group had to earn a certain number of points to receive the recognition.

Larry Kowalski, faculty adviser of the accounting honorary, said the group has been involved in various activities including professional meetings, conventions, tutoring accounting students, providing accounting services for the Greater Toledo Easter Seal Telethon and preparing tax returns for senior citizens.

"Superior chapter is recognition for hard work done," Kowalski said.

Chapter President Jeff Kelley said the honor is also good for the University.

Because of the honor, the organization received money to award two $500 scholarships to award to students in the organization.

Interested accounting students can join the group if they meet certain requirements. The honorary accepts students who maintain at least a 3.0 GPA in their upper level accounting classes.

Students wanting to join can pledge the honorary for one semester and then become active in the group.

Kowalski said he encourages interested students to get involved in the organization.

"While attending these events, students are getting to meet professionals in an informal situation," he said. "It is also good for networking."

Kelley agreed that joining the honorary can have many benefits for students.

"The field of accounting is very public related - you are interacting with clients and other professionals," he said. "Getting involved in Beta Alpha Psi helps develop that professionalism for students."

Kowalski said it is the students who benefit from getting involved in the group.

"It is good to have extracurricular involvement that helps to enhance the academic program," he said.

The University's chapter of Beta Alpha Psi has about 50 members, half of whom are active and half who are new pledges. There will be another pledge drive for interested students in January.

Computer resume system available

University students have new option for job search

By Joshua Mossing
The BG News

University students who are beginning their job search have a new option for preparing their resumes, in addition to the Resume Expert program available at Career Planning and Placement Services.

Career/Net is a new computer resume system produced by I/Net, Inc.

Jim Hemphill, vice president for marketing, said students may enter over 100 different kinds of information to create a resume profile.

"These resume profiles are placed on a CD-ROM disk and sent to employers," Hemphill said. "We guarantee that we get that CD-ROM disk to 10,000 employers, including Fortune 500 companies."

Hemphill said that Career/Net benefits both students and employers.

"Career/Net allows the students to record any piece of information they want, more than they could put on a normal resume," he said.

The software will allow employers to find information quickly and easily, Hemphill said.

"It will revolutionize the way people are employed," he said.

The Career/Net software, which is only available to students, costs $99.95 plus $4.95 shipping and handling. Students may update their profiles twice on the program.

A second option for students at the University is the Resume Expert software.

Using Resume Expert, students create their resumes by filling in windows of information, according to JoAnn Kroll, Director of Career Planning and Placement Services.

Resume Expert, which costs $20, contains 17 different sections of information. The system also contains built-in help menus to assist the student.

"We guarantee that we get that CD-ROM disk to 10,000 employers, including Fortune 500 companies."

Jim Hemphill
vice president for marketing

"When employers come to us with a job opening, we can tell them which students and alumni meet the criteria for their job," Kroll said.

Planning and Placement Services receives notice of about 10,000 job openings each year, according to Kroll.

BGSU views conference

University participates in national discussion

By Angelica D. Huesca
The BG News

The University and about 75 other colleges will participate in a live, nationwide video conference Friday to find ways to improve race relations in the classroom.

The conference, titled "Teaching about Racism: Tools and Strategies" will take place at 1 p.m. at Old Dominion University in Virginia. University students, faculty and staff will be able to participate in the conference via satellite from 113 Olscamp Hall.

The Office of Multicultural Affairs and The People for Racial Justice Committee are local co-sponsors of the event.

Jack Taylor, assistant vice president for Multicultural Affairs, said he believes racism is one of the major significant social problems confronting the United States today.

"Racism is indeed one of America's significant social problems and affects all aspects of our society," Taylor said. "Therefore it is imperative that institutions of higher education involve themselves in providing the origins and consequences of race and racism in American society."

The conference will provide an opportunity for all educators to find ways they can help to build racial harmony and better address issues of race in all levels of teaching.

"Non-minority educators probably feel uncomfortable with teaching about race and racism," Taylor said. "Hopefully this workshop will equip them with the educational techniques and strategies to comfortably and directly address the issues of race and racism within the classroom setting."

The conference will feature Louise Derman-Sparks, author of "Anti-Bias Curriculum: Tools for Empowering Young Children" and Lecia J. Brooks, of The National Conference of Christians and Jews. Brooks is a producer and coordinator of programs that promote racial, ethnic and inter-religious understanding.

Discussion topics will include the characteristics of anti-bias/anti-racist curriculum, a five-step model for integrating the curriculum into the classroom setting and how to apply anti-racist education strategies across the curriculum and across age groups.

There will also be a panel leading an open discussion following the video conference.

The conference is targeted at educators of all levels including administrators such as principals and superintendents. Students enrolled in education programs at colleges and universities are also welcome to attend.

ROTC students win awards

By Tracy Todd
The BG News

Bursar bills are no longer a problem for several University students.

Thanks to the Air Force, 11 University students have received full-ride scholarships.

The awards consist of full tuition, full room and board, complete coverage for text books and an extra $150 a month.

"This national level scholarship is highly competitive and Bowling Green did really well," said Carter Genson, a unit from the ROTC. "A couple of years ago we had only one or two people qualified receive the scholarship, this year everyone who applied was qualified."

The scholarship is based on a

2.5 GPA for technical majors and a 3.0 GPA for non-technical majors, as well as community service, physical fitness and the AFQT, the Air Force version of the ACT.

"When the student accepts the scholarship they then sign a contract with the Air Force that guarantees them a four-year job starting at $24,000," Captain Andy Nagley said.

Between the recipients' sophomore and junior years, they must attend a four-week training camp during the summer. The camp follows the pattern of a mini-boot camp, Genson said.

the home of the "UIC Puckheads."

The Puckheads consisted of 12 strapping UIC students armed with duck calls and inflatable dolls. They flanked the arena sending these calls bellowing in the air. So I pulled out old Besie and fired a couple rounds up into the rafters, but no game fell down upon the ice.

The duck calls were interrupted by periodic referee beatings. Our eyes caught the inflatable "ref" high into the air and laughing as he came crashing down onto the seats.

I assume the Puckheads were inspired by the great music that played that night. I can honestly say that in all my years of watching hockey I have never heard Jimi Hendrix at a game. "Crosstown Traffic" even brought out the raspy voices of the reporters.

Later, we heard The Doors, Lenny Kravitz and Marky Mark. Imagine The Funky Bunch singing the Canadian anthem at the Stanley Cup and having no idea where Canada is.

Sorry, Freddy and Frieda, you are still the cheesiest mascots in the midwest. The Flames mascot was a dragon whose costume did not resemble the twisted creation of a high-school home economics student gone mad.

The dragon even had a refreshing attitude. He casually laughed at an innocent little boy who shot the puck wide during the intermission festivities.

Rypien to start Sunday for injured Testaverde

By Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio -- Mark Rypien was working with the first string but banged-up Vinny Testaverde also did some light work with the Cleveland Browns on Wednesday.

Testaverde, who has been forced to leave each of the last two games because of head injuries, is listed as doubtful for the Browns' game Sunday against New England. Coach Bill Belichick has already said Rypien will start.

"I'd love to play," Testaverde said. "I want to play. I think it's best for me that I don't, so I can get back to 100 percent, and best for the team, because that way Mark can get the reps in practice."

Testaverde said it's too early to tell whether he'll be in uniform and available for emergency duty Sunday.

"We'll see as the week goes on," he said. "It would be premature for me to say right now."

Testaverde sustained a mild concussion when he was sacked by Cincinnati's Dan Wilkinson two weeks ago. He was knocked dizzy again Sunday in Denver when he was sandwiched between Broncos Simon Fletcher and Harald Hasselbach.

Rypien finished both games.

Testaverde still seemed dazed and in pain when he spoke with reporters after the Denver game but was sharp and in good spirits Wednesday. Tests proved "that I have a brain in my head," he said, smiling. "People have questioned that at times."

He said doctors have given him a clean bill of health.

"I need to let my head rest so this doesn't keep happening," he said. "They think it [the second injury] might have been related [to the first one], but there's no way they can be 100 percent sure."

Cleveland's Vinny Testaverde (left) will take a back seat to quarterback Mark Rypien (right) in Sunday's game against the New England Patriots.

"I've never experienced anything like this in my career. That's why they feel a week off will do me good, and I'll be able to come back 100 percent."

Retirement isn't yet a consideration. Repeated concussions forced former Chicago and Pittsburgh running back Merrill Hoge to retire last month.

"I don't think my injury was to the extent that Merrill's was," Testaverde said. "To be honest, I don't even know the extent of his. I feel confident with the results I got back from the doctor."

Men's tennis team finishes with win

By Garrett Walkup
The BG News

The men's and women's tennis teams wrapped up the autumn leg of their schedule last weekend. The men finished undefeated in their dual matches this season beating DePaul Saturday in Chicago 4-3 in their only head-to-head match.

While the team is done for the fall, five players will be competing in the ITA Rolex Mid-West Qualifier in Madison, Wis. Nov. 4 to Nov. 7. Four singles and two doubles teams are in the top 96 in the Mid-West and will be making the trip.

Totaling up the statistics for the men, BG finished first in its own Falcon Invitational the beginning of September, second at the Eastern Michigan Invitational and ninth out of 17 squads at the Ball State Tournament, beating several Big Ten teams.

Andrew Bonser, Mark Ciochetto, Joel Terman, Adam Tropp and Seth Demling will be heading to Madison for the Falcons. If they win, they go to Dallas in February for the national finals.

"DePaul was a big win for us," head coach Dave Morin said. "We knew it would be close and we beat a good team."

The women's team also finished its fall schedule last weekend against DePaul, but lost 4-3 at Keefe Courts. The Falcons ended with a dual match record of 3-2 this fall.

Three players had inconsistent playing time. Senior captain Erin Bowbeer just started playing two weeks ago due to back injury, junior Patty Bank has had limited practice time and senior captain Kassie Hembree has not been in the line-up the last three matches.

Two team members qualified for the women's Rolex Mid-West in East Lansing, Mich. Sophomore Cindy Mikolajewski will be playing singles and she and Bank will be playing doubles.

The two teams are now done until January when they start their winter indoor schedule and then they begin their MAC spring matches.
